
INSIDER INFORMATION

Background: Passing between classes can be a very interesting time. Since you have gotten to high school, you recognize there can be some very important lessons learned in that brief five-minute passing period. Particularly at the end of quarters, you've seen that students will exchange a lot of information about tests in between classes. You recognize you are at a great disadvantage if you don't get the information, too. Two periods before you are to take a history test, you overhear two students discussing the same history exam they took last period. You want to know what they have to say (Wangaard 2006).

The Actors: You, two other students, your teacher, other classmates

Stop! Are my emotions in control? Do I have a dilemma? (Describe the problem.)

Think!

What are my choices?	What character traits would be demonstrated?	How does the Golden Rule apply?
1.
2.
3.
4.

Act! What character traits do I choose to demonstrate? What choice will I make?

What supporting character traits or skills will I need to act on my choice? Do I need to ask for help?